Editorial philosophy: The Revista de Estudios Sociales (RES) is a quarterly journal (January-March, April-June, July-September and October-December) published at the beginning of each of these periods, created in 1998 and funded by the Faculty of Social Sciences of the Universidad de los Andes (Colombia). Its objective is to contribute to the dissemination of the research, analyses and opinions that the national and international academic community elaborates on social problems, as well as those of other sectors of society that also deserve to be known by the public. For this reason, the journal receives and publishes previously unpublished contents in Spanish, English and Portuguese. In this way, the journal seeks to broaden the field of knowledge on subjects that will contribute to a better understanding of the most immediate reality and the living conditions of the population.
